Sheffield School and College Seniors Have Separate Exercises.

Special Despatch to Tax Sun. New Haven, June 16 .- It was class day at Yale to-day. Early in the morning the fifty-seven different classes that had come back for reunions were togged out for the week and every street in the vicinity of the campus was crowded with gay Orientals, picturesque cowboys, artists in clothes that proclaimed the Latin quarter of Paris and "gobs" from everywhere under the sun. A whole circus troupe represented in the outfits donned by the men of 1913.

When the senior class of the Sheffield Scientific School and their guests gathered on Vanderbilt Square at 10:30 A. Then along came the reunion classes from the col-lege and added more color to the scene. The crowds of girls in their summer clothes all added a touch of variety to the gayest scene that had ever been recorded on the Sheff campus.

The exercises opened with the singing of "Brave Mother Yale." Then John Laws Campbell of Montclair, N. J., gave the class history, which was followed by a selection by the 102d band, which recently returned from overseas. William Fisher Williams of New York then gave the class prophecy. Another selection by the 102d band was received enthusiastically and E. Brewster Crawford of this city gave the class cration. The exshashcally and E. "Amici" was the next song on the programme after which Melville Washington Borders of Chicago delivered the class oration, and the exercises closed with "Bright College Years." The class with the band, and followed by many of the guesta, proceeded across the campus to the Linenian and Brothers Library, where the class by was planted, while Dean Major-Gen. Enoch H.
